DEATH OF J.B. WALDEN

Former City Treasurer Expired Last Night.

HAD CHECKERED CAREER

PASSED FROM WEALTH TO DEEP

Came Here as a Young Traveling Salesman and Rapidly Worked His Way Up to a High Place-His Election to the Treasurership the Cause of His Fall.

Joseph B. Walden, who but a few years since was recognized as one of Salt Lake's most capable and success ful business men, died of acute alco holism at the Keeley institute shortly o'clock last night. Walder to the reacue his body may be laid in a

In his comparatively short existence In his comparatively short existence—he was only 35 years old—Joe Walden tasted the best that life can give. The bitterness came, too, and the dregs were at his lips when he was summoned across the dark river.
Few young men have started in the world with brighter prospects than the man who dred in poverty last night. Few have looked upon a fairer davning of life's sun, few have seen a darker setting. Waiden was born in New setting. Waiden was born in New and the small, leve have seen a darker setting. Wailden was born in New Liberty, Ky., April 9, 1855. His father was J. C. Wailden, a Virginia gentleman and a minister of the Christian church. On his mother's side he was descended from the Winstons, one of the proudest families in the blue grass state.

First Great Misfortune.

The first great misfortune, that befel Joe Walden was the death of his mother, although he was then too young to realize it. She died while he was still an infant. The boy grew up is fine and talented a young fellow as ever went out of Kentieky in quest of fame and forsune. At 18 years of age he was traveling salesman for Samuel Cupples, a woodenware manufacturer of St. Louis.

He was drawing a salary of $250 per of St. Louis. He was drawing a salary of $250 per month when he came to Salt Lake sixteen years ago in this capacity. It was bug pay for so young a man, but Walden had demonstrated his capacity and was able to earn every dollar of it. He saved his money, and it wasn't long before he hamehed out on his own account under the firm name of Walden & Pavey in the willow and woodenware business.

business. Prosperous times followed. Money flowed into the coffers of the institu-tion and Walden came to be looked on as one of the most sagacious and far-sighted business men in Sait Lake. Things were coming Walden's way in a style calculated to turn the heads of most men.

Nominated For Treasurer.

Nominated For Treasurer.

In 1890 the Liberal campaign was started. The committee in charge of the movement sitted the field of available timber very closely in order to find candidates who could poil the needed votes. Walden was settled on as the ideal candidate for treasurer. He was only 27, but his shrewdness in business coupled with his popularity with all classes of people, made him both the natural and the logical choice.

It was an evil moment for Joe Walden when he agreed to become a candidate. By nature a companionable, genial fellow, he thought it his duty to become more so. He became 'one of the book," and little by little acquired the habit of drinking. The habit became a disense. Walden was elected treasurer, but it was as dearly bought an office as ever fell to any man. He gave up his woodenware business in order that he might have more time to attend to his treasurer-polary.

He made a good treasurer-nobody vill deny that. His books and accounts trust Walden brought the same he had evidenced in private life.

Still a "Good Fellow."

But when his term expired, he was still a "good fellow." He was good to verybody but himself, and before he callzed it, his fortune had slipped away. It was all gone in a few year of good fellowship and Walden was an enniless as when he left his old Ken entitless as when he left his old Ken-ucky home. A year ago he went to sold Springs. Ida., where he worked in a mercantile establishment. Still he could not overcome his ap-erite for whisky. Three days ago he ame to Sait Lake in the last stages of alcoholism, to take treatment at the celev institute. His condition was uch that he could not be treated at uce, and Dr. E. S. Wright was try-ing to presure him for the course. It can too late. He grow gradually worse.

stated. There is another side to Joe Walden's life history. In a little cottage at 250 East Second South street, a woman whose face bore marks of care and suffering told it. In the early days of his prosperity, Walden met Mies Augusta Baker. The warm friendship that followed became love, and after a brief courtship, the couple were married. Walden installed his bride in a handsome home and surbride in a hardsome home and sur-rounded her with all the comforts and hazuries of life.

May Be Buried As Pauper.

May Be Buried As Pauper.

Mr. Walden's circumstances are such that she will be unable to bear the expense of a funeral. The dead man had a number of half-brothers and sisters, children by his father's second wife, but the? are all in moderate circumstances and live in eastern states. His father died half a dozen years ago. The living relatives have not been communicated with and the chances are that they will not be.

Walden's body was taken to Jeseph William Tuylor's undertaking estubilishment shortly after he breathed his last. Unless funds are raised this menning to provide otherwise the funeral will occur from Mr. Taylor's 166 Main street.

Why They Bonned Newell.

A few days since Henry Newell, the successful mining man, sold his house for $20,000 cash. A day or two after the Hanna harples pounced upon Mr. Newell as the right man to run for mayor. This is not exact, they wished to run that $20,000 cash for mayor, not Mr. Newell. And they imagine that Mr. Newell himself cannot see through a hole in a ladder.

A. G. Campbell for mayor.

The Democrats of the Serond precinct are preparing to trof out a candidate for mayor in the person of the popular mining man, Allan G. Campbell. In him they consider they have a man who could smash the best combination the enemy could make. George G. Smith, W. B. Levelle and John Afien is the councilman combination most talked of at this time. Of course, this combination is subject to alterations
